AFFAIRS IN .BROOKLYN.

THE KISSICKS' FAMILY SKELETONS. LAID BARE IN COURT, BUT THE WIFE FAILS TO GET A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Margaret Kissick failed to secure limited divorce from William Kissick, proprietor of a business college at No. 47 Ashland Place, in the Supreme Court yesterday. Judge Cullen heard the case in ecial Term and gave judgment for the del after hearing the evidence. It showed that Mrs. Kissick was jealous of a pupil in the husband's school. named Miss Ann Anaelia Schult. Mrs. Kissick testifled that she had been married in 1869 and that her husband had ill-treated her for several years. He had

When she had opposed his making Miss schult a teacher in the school he had threatened to kill her even if he should hang for it. After Mrs. Kissick had ordered the girl to leave the house her husband had quarrelled with her. A paper was also put in evidence which the witness had written in 1889, when feeling "perfectly lonely." It set forth that when had a good-looking English cook her husband spent much time in the kitchen, and said the cook was the nicest woman he had ever seen. She dis-charged the cook and had peace until she hired another pretty servant, and her husband frequented the kitchen again. Her husband afterward had another "flame" and purchased a house for the hussy." In the paper Mrs. Kissick charged her husband with being "a covenant breaker and transgressor of the Ten Commandments."

Robert Kissick testified that he had defended his mother from the assault of his father when the spil-teacher went away. The defendant testified that when his wife had ordered the young woman out of the house he had asked her why she inter ferred with him and his son had struck him in the eye and the cook had held his arms while his wife beat him with a blackthorn stick. He had fallen wer a rocking-chair and his son had kicked him in ue side. He denied threatening to kill his wife, he had taken money from his pocket and desk and a had told her that she was teaching her son to be thief and was fitting him for a prison, where her rothers were.

CHARGES AGAINST A POLICE SERGEANT

THE COMPLAINANT, MISS FREAM, CALLED A MISCHIEF MAKER. Police Sergeant Felix McKenna, of the Fifth-st and, was tried before Commissioner Sheehan at the Central Office yesterday on a charge of neglect Rebecca Frenm, of No. 33 Cannon st. Miss Fream s a gray-balled woman. She said yesterday Emanuel Friend, McKenna's counsel, that she was a detective from "the Lord's Headquarters." She was on her way to a mission in Second-ave., where sh had been invited to make an address, she said, on th man stygger out of the liquor store at First ave, and Fifth-st., directly opposite the police station. It Sunday, and she decided that the Excise lay was being violated. She followed two men into thirteen men dricking at the bar. She spoke to the barkeeper about the open and flugrant violation of the law in such close proximity to the police station she said, and then went to the station to make : When she told him that the law was being delated in the liquor store and that she had been n the place, he had told her to go to the Essex Market Police Court and make her complaint there He had shouted at her in a rude and angry manne He had refused to send a pollceman to arrest the Miss Fream's cross-examination by Mr. Friend was long and trying. He sought to make her admit that be had been a mischlef maker in the Willett-st. Church officers of the church had passed resolutions request ing her to stay away from the meetings. He questioned her about the murder of Rachel Pittman. Frank Pittman killed his daughter and afterward committed suicide in the Tombs daughter had been staying with Miss Fream before order. Mrs. Pittman, the widow of the derer. listened to the testimony vesterday and be That woman lies!

That woman lies:

Later Mrs. Fittman was called to testify, and she declared that her husband had killed the daughter on account of trouble caused by Miss Fream. Two other witnesses testified that they knew Miss Fream and would not believe her under oath. A. H. Brummell, the candy manufacturer, who has been prominent in the affairs of the Willett-st, Church, testified that Miss Fream was a mischief-maker, and had been asked, to keep away from the church meetings.

Sergeam McKenna said he had not been rude to Miss Fream. He had told her that he had no policeman to send to the liquor store at the time, and he had advised her to make her compisint at the police court. A policeman who entered the station after she went out, had been sent to the liquor store to make an arrest if possible. The policeman testified that he found the doors of the liquor store locked.
